It is already three years since the law n. 154 of 2001 concerning protection against familial abuses came into force. This volume offers the expert in law, the psychologist, the social worker, the voluntary associations, and anyone else working in the field of family protection, a view of the latest civil and penal jurisprudence concerning the measures taken against familial violence. The interdisciplinary approach helps in a reading that is closer to reality while the structure of the analysis of each case allows even those who are not expert in legal matter to create a personal view of the facts and types of decisions taken by the judicial authorities.

Lightening the technical evaluations with a considerable fluent analysis of concrete cases, sometimes involving even though dramatic, the book is one of the first publications of this subject.
